The survey, which was completed May 7-8, and 10, 2008, has a margin of error of plus or minus 3.46 percentage points (+3.46%) in 95 out of 100 cases.

The survey was developed by the two firms and NPR. This is our twenty-fifth survey in the NPR series.
Voters have become even more pessimistic about the direction of the country.

In-Depth Message Testing
On four issues - the economy, Iraq, foreign trade, and taxes - we read voters the issue positions of both political parties and asked them which statement came closer to their own views. Half of the respondents were read a version that included the Republican and Democratic labels, while the other half received questions without partisan cues.
A solid majority favors Democrats’ proposed change in the economy geared towards the middle class.

“Which statement comes closest to your own opinion...”

Republicans/Some people say fixing the economy requires both immediate action and longer term action to keep and create jobs. To start, we need stop all federal taxes on gasoline from Memorial Day to Labor Day to make gas more affordable, provide new guaranteed federal mortgages for people facing foreclosure and new funds to protect student loans. In the long term, we need to cut middle class taxes, double the federal tax credit for children, and make permanent the research and development tax incentives needed to create the new ideas and technology that will help keep and create jobs in America.

Democrats/Other people say this economy has worked well for CEOs but not for the middle class, and we need a big change in direction. Income is down, but the cost for food, gas, health care and college are through the roof. We should repeal the special tax breaks for companies moving jobs overseas and for the oil companies. We need to cut middle class taxes across the board, limit drug prices and make health care affordable. We should partner with business to rebuild our highways and transportation infrastructure, and invest in clean alternative energy to create the jobs of the future.
Independents are opting more for the Democratic message on the economy.

Voters agree with the Democratic Party’s message on Iraq.

“Which statement comes closest to your own opinion...”

Republicans/Some people say there has been military and political progress in Iraq, and that to withdraw now would cost more in lives and create more instability in the Middle East. Just recently, Osama bin Laden said, "Iraq is the perfect base to set up the jihad to liberate Palestine." Iraq is the central battleground in the war against radical Islamic extremism, and because there have been no terrorist attacks in the United States for seven years, it is a war America is winning. The war in Iraq will be over soon, and the insurgency should be handled by Iraqis instead of Americans. But, we need to rely on the judgment of our military commanders in Iraq, instead of the politicians in Washington on when to withdraw American troops.

Democrats/Other people say the war in Iraq has cost us trillions of dollars while our economy has weakened, and has made America less secure. We must strengthen America's security by starting to reduce our troops in Iraq in a responsible way, force the Iraqi government to use its oil money to pay for reconstruction and work with other nations to bring stability. We need to restore our military, deal with Afghanistan and begin to invest in our own country.

On foreign trade, a majority agree with the Democratic position.

“Which statement comes closest to your own opinion...”

Republicans/Some people say competition from China, India, and other countries will not end, so we must ensure America can compete and we can keep and create jobs here. We should trade freely and fairly with other countries, but when other countries break the rules, we must enforce the rules. We must also make the research and development tax incentives permanent to create the ideas and technology that will create a new generation of jobs. Taxes on U.S. businesses are the second highest in the world, and we cannot keep our jobs unless these taxes are lowered. We must invest significantly more in education and job training to prepare U.S. workers for the new jobs that will be created by new businesses.

Democratic/Other people say for too long time big businesses and big politicians in Washington have not worried about American jobs. They think NAFTA is good and have done nothing about unsafe products from China. They give tax breaks to companies that move jobs overseas. We need a change starting with a trade policy that opens foreign markets to American businesses to support good American jobs and enforce labor and environmental standards to dumping. To start, we need to renegotiate NAFTA, invest in job training and research, and get health care costs down so American companies can compete and win.
The Democrat advantage on trade with Independents is smaller, but significant.

The Democratic language about middle class tax relief resonates very well.

“Which statement comes closest to your own opinion...”

Republicans/Some people say we must cut taxes on the middle class and double the federal tax credit for dependents for every family in America. We must permanently ban internet taxes and ban new cell phone taxes. We must stop corporate welfare by removing the tax loopholes that are costly and unfair. And, it is time to reduce the pressure to raise taxes by once and for all ending the tens of billions of dollars of our tax money that is squandered by Congress on useless pork-barrel projects.

39% 34%

Democrats/Other people say with such financial pressure on pressures on families, we need to focus completely on middle class tax relief and making sure government works for them, not the special interests. We should limit the influence of lobbyists and repeal the special interest tax breaks for oil companies and repeal President Bush's tax breaks for those earning over two hundred thousand dollars so that we can really help the middle class. We should extend tax credits for children, make college costs tax deductible and cut taxes across the board for the middle class.
